

Sports channels play the regional game

Star, Sony and Doordarshan are tweaking programmes and focusing on localisation to widen the audience and revenue base

TE NARASIMHAN
Chennai, 9 May

In the 2018 edition of the Indian Premier League that kicked off in April, the action is visible not just on the field, but also off it. If batsmen are amassing tons, broadcasters too are scoring big viewership points as the cricket season draws on.

Their plan to telecast the matches live in a host of regional languages is helping the sport reach a wider audience than ever before. With commentary in Tamil, Telugu, Kannada and Bengali, Star India, the official broadcaster of the IPL, saw its viewership increase 39 per cent in south India after the second week of the start of the tournament, against 5.9 per cent growth overall in the country.

Tweaking programmes to appeal to regional markets has worked for entertainment and news channels, and now broadcasters are keen to help sports transcend linguistic barriers to reach new audiences. The market, say experts, appears ripe for such an experiment, with new audiences tuning in to sports and the sky-high advertisement rates for cricket with commentary in English or Hindi creating a demand for a more segmented advertisement market.

In anticipation of a spike in viewership, broadcasters are adding new programmes and rolling out new channels. Ten channels dedicated to sports have been launched in the last three years, taking the total to 27, with a combined viewership of 780 million in 2017. Interestingly, women comprise 38 per cent of the total audience share and their number is growing thanks to notable performances by female athletes in sports ranging from cricket, golf, boxing, badminton and tennis to shooting in recent years.

All the three big players in the segment — Doordarshan, Star and Sony — are pitching for localisation, be it by way of more local programming or a sharpened focus on telecast of state-level events. Sony, for example, broadcasts cricket in three languages. Star plans to broadcast the IPL in six languages, from four currently, and DD has launched a free-to-air sports channel, besides widening the reach of its main channel DD sports. After a dedicated Tamil sports channel, Star is set to roll out a Kannada language regional sports channel — Star Sports Kannada.

Sanjay Gupta, managing director, Star India, expects India's engagement with sports to take a big leap forward. In particular, he expects a boom in locally relevant content in regional languages. Currently, language feeds comprise 20-30 per cent of viewers, while Hindi dominates at 60-70 per cent and English accounts for 10 per cent.

Sony has grown its network of sports channel from one in 2012 to 11 in a span of five years. Though a round-the-clock service in regional languages is still a while away, it plans to tap the market through various language feeds.

The localisation trend is partly being fuelled by the rise in popularity of non-cricketing sports, mainly football and including kabaddi, which have a more rustic, rural appeal. Small towns accounts for 47 per cent of the total viewership for these sports, say industry experts. Currently, there are 10 sporting leagues in India, including hockey, kabaddi, football and badminton. An EY report said that the fifth season of Pro Kabaddi League in 2017 saw a surge in viewership by 59 per cent compared to the inaugural day of season four in 2016.

No wonder, then, there is an increase in the number of advertisers wanting to own ad spots in sports other than cricket, which commands upwards of ₹0.5 million for a 10-second spot. Kabaddi and football, which till recently struggled to find advertisers, now have a going rate of ₹0.15-0.25 million for a 10-second ad spot.

The broadcasters are also eyeing the business from local sports leagues led by newspaper companies such as news channel ABP News and Marathi newspaper Lokmat that operate in tier I and II cities. Metronation Chennai Television, a part of Tamil media group Daily Thanthi, for example, owns the South Chennai team for Tamil Nadu Premier League, a cricket league on the lines of the IPL. Entertainment company Cineyug has also launched a T10 cricket tournament in West Asia to tap local investors in sports, says Rajesh Kaul, president (distribution and sports business), Sony Pictures Networks India.

“The emergence of a number of sports leagues has resulted in a remarkable growth in the sports viewership and it continues to grow. Coupled with regional language feeds, domestic leagues for sports are also driving growth for sports viewership,” he says. “The market is clearly open to experiment.”

But TV is not the only format broadcasters have their eyes set on. Digital platforms such as over-the-top and social networks are big on their agenda too. Over 50 million Indians are actively consuming sports content on digital, according to the EY report. The India Today Group has launched a digital platform for sports called Sports Tak. HT Media has entered into a joint venture with sports media and technology firm Minute Media, the parent company of two football content sites, 90min and 12up. The deal will mark the launch of 90min in India with an app and a website providing football content.

Industry expects sports content on digital media to grow at 18 per cent over the next two years. Sundar Ram, CEO (sports), Reliance Industries Limited, expects digital channels to emerge as a major revenue stream. For sports broadcasters, it appears to be game on.

Google eases tech stress with app controls, booking assistant

REUTERS
9 May

Google on Tuesday showed how its virtual assistant can now call restaurants and salons to book appointments, navigating complex conversations, as the Alphabet Inc unit acknowledged that a technological onslaught was leaving users frazzled and needing a cure.

The demonstrations at Google I/O, an annual event for creators of Google-compatible products, showed how big technology companies are positioning themselves for a lucrative artificial intelligence revolution while grappling with heightened scrutiny about their societal influence. Chief Executive Sundar Pichai and other officials said Google should find ways to reduce stress from technology and improve customers' “digital well-being.” “We can't just be wide-eyed about the innovations technology creates,” he added. Google showed how its email programme can suggest sentences and how Google Assistant can call a salon or restaurant to make an appointment or reservation.

A new tool in its Android software, which runs most of the world's mobile phones, will notify users how much they are using apps and let them set limits for themselves and family members.

Google, Facebook Inc, Amazon.com Inc, Microsoft Corp and other technology leaders are vying to keep users in their apps to maintain booming businesses of selling ads, goods or online computing services.

Amazon's Echo has taken the lead on “smart speakers” using voice assistants. Offloading tasks to virtual assistants to manage photos, emails and schedules is part of the companies' remedy for decreasing screen time.
